Rev. Fr. Dr. J. E. Arulraj

OUR FOUNDER & CHAIRMAN – DMI Group of Institutions

Dear Members of the DMI Family,

The world around us is changing faster than ever before. Technology is evolving, teaching methods are transforming, and markets are shifting in unpredictable ways. In such times, standing still is not a safe option — it is, in fact, a path to irrelevance. As educators and institutional leaders, we must rise to this moment of transformation. The future will belong to those who can learn, unlearn, and relearn with agility and purpose. Let us boldly explore:

New Courses that reflect the needs of a digital, interconnected, and entrepreneurial world.
New Teaching Methods that go beyond textbooks — fostering creativity, collaboration, and critical thinking.
New Mindsets that prepare our students to thrive in change, not fear it.

At DMI, we have always believed that education is not about preserving tradition but about reimagining possibilities. This is what makes our journey unique — rooted in faith, guided by excellence, and open to innovation.

Let this season of change inspire each one of us to reflect, reinvent, and renew our mission. Together, we can transform every challenge into an opportunity to grow and serve better.

EDITORIAL

Prof. M J Xavier

CEO – DMI Foundations and Chief Editor

Dear Members of the DMI Family,

I am delighted to share an inspiring development from St. Joseph University, led by our honorable Vice-Chancellor Dr. Subbiah Bharathi. The University has launched a pioneering new initiative — the Joseph Institute of Business Administration (JIBA) — conceived as a model institution that redefines what higher education can and should be in the age of Artificial Intelligence. As knowledge becomes commoditized through the rise of generative AI, the true differentiator is no longer information, but skills, creativity, and practical wisdom. JIBA has been designed around this very philosophy.

In this innovative model, students will:

Spend less time in conventional classrooms and more time in the field — working with industries and NGOs to experience real-life challenges.

Be assessed through presentations, viva-voce, project work, and case analyses, instead of traditional memory-based examinations.

Receive continuous hands-on training and mentoring that nurtures both professional and personal growth.

JIBA's vision is to blend academic rigor with experiential learning, shaping graduates who are not just employable but empowered — ready to lead, to serve, and to adapt in a world defined by change.This initiative marks a significant step forward in the DMI Group's ongoing journey to reimagine education for the future. It is a proud moment for all of us — and a powerful reminder that true education is not about filling minds, but about shaping lives.

Bridging Global Boundaries

University of Parma, Italy – Building International Partnerships

From 8th to 10th September 2025, the campus had the honour of hosting a delegation from the University of Parma, Italy. The three-day visit focused on fostering academic exchange, joint research, and collaborative learning initiatives. The productive discussions laid the groundwork for the signing of a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) that will establish a framework for long-term institutional cooperation. This partnership is expected to provide students and faculty with valuable global exposure and expanded research opportunities

Strengthening Industry Relations

On 23rd September 2025, a high-level meeting was held with the TVS team at their workshop in Dar es Salaam. The discussions focused on the establishment of a training centre designed to bridge the gap between classroom learning and practical industry skills. The proposed facility aims to provide students with hands-on experience and to enhance their employability in technical and engineering fields

Engagement with Car and General Tanzania Trading Limited

On 26th September 2025, representatives from Car and General visited the institution to assess facilities for setting up a new training centre, ensuring alignment with industry standards. Earlier, on 19th August 2025, a University delegate visited Car and General Trading Ltd., Tanzania, to provide consultancy support on a tilting mechanism design, offering detailed feedback and prototype testing plans to enhance safety and performance.

Meeting with CIDC and ECI Delegates

On 26th September 2025, a high-level dialogue was held with delegates from the Construction Industry Development Corporation (CIDC) and the Engineering Council of India (ECI). Organised by the Engineers Registration Board (ERB), the meeting focused on exploring opportunities for institution–industry collaboration, particularly in areas of engineering capacity-building, professional development, and student training.

Ensuring Academic Quality

Quality Cell – Driving Institutional Excellence

On 12th September 2025, the Heads of Department convened to review ongoing Quality Cell initiatives. The discussions focused on strengthening feedback mechanisms, improving evaluation practices, and enhancing overall academic standards. The session culminated in the development of a strategic roadmap aimed at further advancing institutional performance and accountability.

Nurturing Student Success

Special Tutorials for Academic Support

Between 1st and 12th September 2025, the College of Engineering and Technology organised intensive tutorial sessions for first-year students facing challenges in Engineering Mathematics I & II, Engineering Mechanics, and Computational Methods. Through personalized instruction and remedial support, faculty members helped students strengthen their understanding of core concepts and build greater confidence in addressing academic challenges.

Project Exhibition – A Showcase of Innovation

The Department of Computer Science and Information Systems Engineering successfully hosted a Project Exhibition during the first week of September. The event featured innovative student projects designed to address real-world challenges through technology. It provided a platform for students to demonstrate creativity, teamwork, and critical thinking, while constructive feedback from faculty members enabled them to further refine and enhance their projects for future application and development.

Research and Publication

The St. Joseph College of Health and Allied Sciences (SJCHAS) is pleased to report that its academic staff have successfully published three research papers in reputable academic journals. Endometriosis Symptoms, Etiology, and Effects of Lifestyle Changes and Food Habits: A Detailed Literature Review

Dr Manju Thomas

Department of Clinical Pharmacology, St Joseph University college of Health and Allied sciences, Dares salaam, Tanzania

Abstract

Endometriosis is a chronic gynecological disorder characterized by the presence of endometrial-like tissue outside the uterine cavity. It affects approximately 10–15% of women of reproductive age and is associated with pelvic pain, dysmenorrhea, dyspareunia, infertility, and reduced quality of life. The pathogenesis of endometriosis is complex and multifactorial, involving hormonal imbalances, genetic predispositions, immunological dysfunctions, environmental exposures, and epigenetic modifications. Lifestyle factors and dietary patterns have emerged as important modulators in the onset and progression of endometriosis. This review aims to synthesize current evidence on the symptoms, etiology, and the role of lifestyle modifications—including physical activity, stress management, sleep, smoking, alcohol, and dietary habits—in the prevention and management of endometriosis. The paper highlights both protective and risk-enhancing behaviors and provides perspectives for future interventions.

Introduction: This study aims to determine care-related risk factors and explore the perspectives of women and care providers about complete wound dehiscence after cesarean section at a tertiary referral and university hospital.
Methods: A mixed-methods study was conducted at Muhimbili National Hospital in Dar es Salaam between April 2019 and December 2020. A case control survey compared the characteristics of interest of 131 cases of complete wound dehiscence with 393 randomly selected controls comprising cesarean deliveries between January 2015 and December 2020. In addition, six semistructured individual in-depth interviews with women, one focus group discussion with care providers, and unstructured direct observations were performed between July 2020 and December 2020. Pearson's Chi-square test and Fisher's exact test were used to determine the percentage difference of risk factors of complete wound dehiscence between cases and controls. Thereafter, a multivariate regression analysis determined the role of the independent risk factors.

Summary. Infertility is a global problem. According to the data of the World Health Organization, 17.5% of people, or one in six people worldwide, suffer from infertility as of 2023. Experts believe that by 2050, a critical decline in the birth rate will lead to a reduction in the number of children under 15 by 40% or more. In Russia, statistics reflect global trends. Therefore, the search for new, effective infertility treatments is a pressing issue in modern medicine. The objective of this review was to analyze and evaluate current data on the use of a hyaluronic acid-enriched medium during embryo transfer to increase implantation rates in infertility treatment cycles using assisted reproductive technologies. The sources of specialized literature used in this review were electronic libraries of scientific publications and medical databases such as Google Scholar, PubMed, and elibrary.ru. The review included relevant publications found through a search using the following keywords: "assisted reproductive technologies," "hyaluronic acid," "embryo," and "endometrium." The study found that the Russian Federation ranks first among European countries and fourth globally in the number of assisted reproductive technology cycles performed (140,931 cycles in 2020 and 158,893 in 2021). However, according to the Russian Association of Human Reproduction and the European Society of Human Reproduction and Embryology, the effectiveness of assisted reproductive technology programs is no more than 40%. Infertility treatment with assisted reproductive technology can be unsuccessful for a number of key factors, including the lack of effective embryo implantation in the endometrium. One of the leading causes of implantation failure of a competent embryo is the failure to form an adhesive matrix between the embryo and the endometrium. The coordinated differentiation of endometrial cells and their interaction with the embryo play a crucial role in this process. It is hypothesized that the use of hyaluronic acid-enriched culture media during embryo transfer may help address the problem of implantation failure in assisted reproductive technology programs. A systematic review of the literature on the use of hyaluronic acid-enriched culture media during embryo transfer to improve assisted reproductive technology outcomes was conducted. Possible mechanisms of action for this medium during assisted reproductive technology embryo transfer are described.

Abstract. In this paper, we focus on the controllability of fuzzy solutions for a specific class of nonlinear second-order functional neutral integrodifferential equations. To tackle this problem, we employ the Banach fixed-point theorem, a fundamental result in functional analysis that is particularly useful for demonstrating the existence and uniqueness of solutions under certain conditions.

Our study revolves around fuzzy numbers, which are a type of mathematical representation used to handle uncertainty and imprecision. Specifically, we consider fuzzy numbers that are normal, convex, upper semicontinuous, and have compactly supported intervals. These properties ensure that the fuzzy numbers are well-behaved and manageable within our theoretical framework.

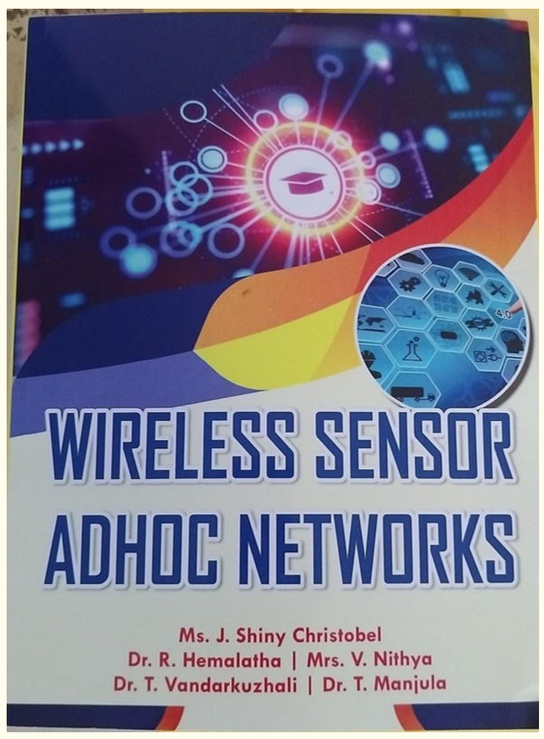

To illustrate the practical application of our theoretical results, we provide an example. This example demonstrates how the conditions and methods developed in the paper can be used to analyze and solve a specific instance of the nonlinear second-order functional neutral integrodifferential equation. By applying our findings, we can verify the controllability of the fuzzy solution in this particular case, thereby validating the theoretical framework and its utility in real-world scenarios.

A seminar on “Core Industry Jobs for Mechanical Engineers” was held on 23rd September 2025 at the EEE Seminar Hall for II and III-year Mechanical Engineering students. Mr S. Kumaresan, Technical Manager at CAD ARTS, highlighted industry trends, essential technical skills, CAD/CAM tools, and adaptability, engaging students in an interactive session to prepare them for successful careers.

Hackthon

The Internal Hackathon for Smart India Hackathon 2025 was held on 19th September, with 62 teams (372 students), representing 35% of the college. Students showcased creativity, teamwork, and problem-solving skills. Greater mentor involvement could enhance outcomes, making the event an inspiring platform for innovation and academic growth.

Project Presentation

The presentation on “Novel Applications from Palm Tree Fibre Using Fiber Reinforced Polymer Matrix Material” showcased sustainable, cost-effective innovations in composite materials. Mr Simiyon, Assistant Director, MSME, appreciated the project’s novelty and industrial potential. The session emphasised bridging academic research with industry, inspiring further advancements in eco-friendly, durable fibre-reinforced composites.

Student's Achievements

Anlet Sheenu M completed an internship on "Emerging Technologies (AI & Cloud)" from 5th June to 2nd July 2025, while Sharon Praiselyn Sekar successfully completed an internship on "Designing Department" from 18th August to 17th September 2025.

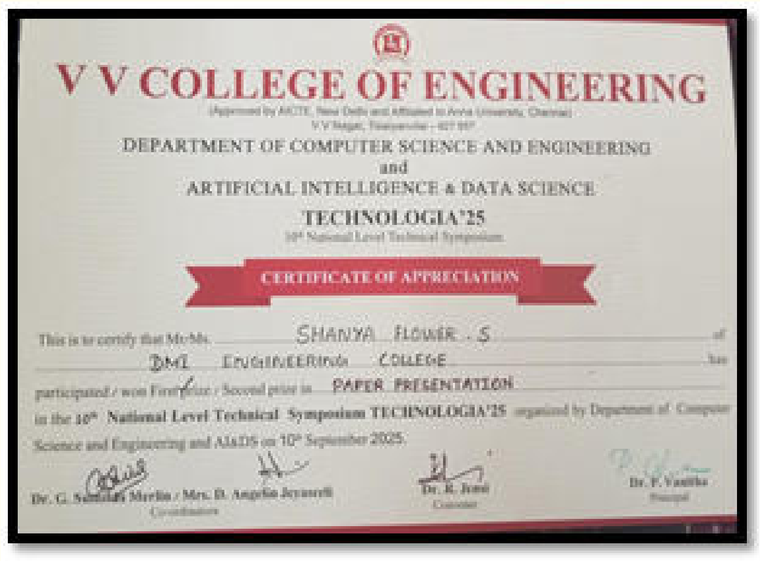

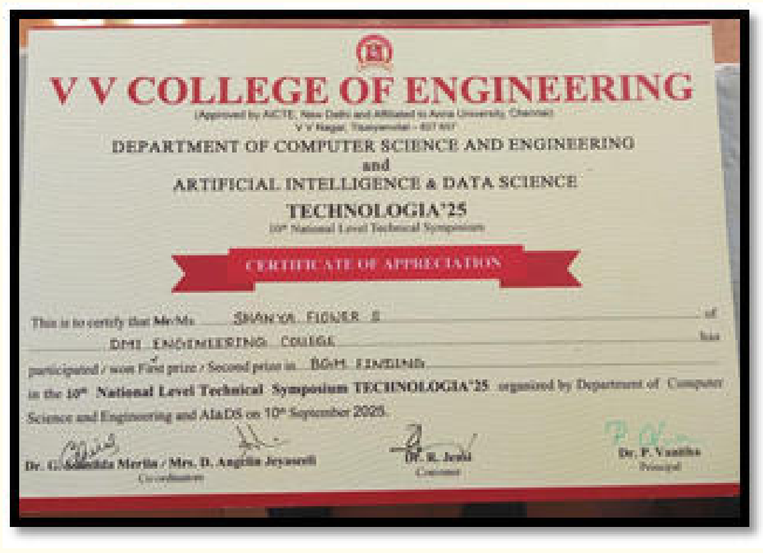

Jerusha, a third-year AI & DS student, actively participated in the 'Guess In Mute' and 'Paper X' events on 12th September 2025 at Arunachala College of Engineering for Women, securing first prize in the former and second prize in the latter.

Shanya Flower, a third-year AI & DS student, actively participated in the 'Paper Presentation' and 'BGM Finding' events on 10th September 2025 at VV College of Engineering, winning first prize in both competitions.

Shanya Flower, a third-year AI & DS student, participated in the 'Paper X' events on 12th September 2025 at Arunachala College of Engineering for Women and won the second prize.

Student's Achievements

Dr B. Baron Sam, HOD of AI & DS, successfully published the journal article "Enhanced Image Restoration via MmiRNet with Context-Aware Deep Learning Inpainting" in Springer, September 2025.

Mrs SL. Sindha Devi, Assistant Professor of AI & DS, successfully co-authored the book "Next Gen-Blockchain: Innovations, Impact, and Insights."
